

I feel the use of cellular phones on flights would negatively contribute to the already trying experience of flying. I've put up with crying babies, vigorous arguments by people using sign language (my ribs were sore for days) and various noise making devices. Where there is little privacy and limited peace, the use of cell phones, based upon personal observation in public, would further the misery experienced by travelers.